To whom it may concern;

It is my honor to recommend Judge Webb to you . On January 7th, 2004 Judge Webb spoke to people in our organization, in the morning and again in the afternoon. He had been recommended highly but I was not prepared for the power of his story. After listening to his morning presentation I called my husband and several friends to insist they come to hear Judge Webb's afternoon presentation.

Judge Webb's message is simple but overwhelming in significance. He presents his story with a masterful blend of humor and emotion, making his message compelling. The importance of treating yourself with respect and valuing others takes on special meaning when delivered in the context of the experience of a poor Korean orphan. The power of Judge Webb's story however, is his ability to weave this foreign experience into a familiar context that any one can relate to. People in our organization are still talking about Judge Webb's story and its personal meaning for them. In less than two hours, Judge Webb made a profound impact on many people in our organization.

I have already recommended Judge Webb to many of my colleagues and, as a result, I expect to have several more opportunities to hear Judge Webb's story. His message is worth hearing over and over again.

Sincerely,

M. Paula Daoust, Ph.D.
